SERGT. ROGERS

Sergt. Rogera, of our little park, his no need of anyone coming to his defense; but so relenties; has been the press in attacking him for his efficient conduct of his charge I feel it to be a pleasant task as a clinen and a lover of good order to voice somewhat the animus of the many who heartily indorse the sergeant, and bid him go forward in the manily discharge of his duty. What legitimate charge can be brought by anyone against him? Has he not brought this little "broathing space" into repute? Has he not reserved the best and special seats for ladies and indicated others for gentlemen." Has he not done his duty in ropressing oaths, indecent comment and language? Has he not at all times, in a kindly and soldier-like manner, approached gentlemen and admonished them that certain seats were reserved for ladies? The writer can attest in his own case, he having inadvertently occupied one of these reserved seats, and in a few minutes was kindly admonished by the sergeant that it was in violation of his instructions, and with an apology for his intrusion, with cap in hand, politely found us another restingplace. We can safely affirm he has always and courteous to ail, and particularly to place. We can safely affirm he has always and at all times been gentlemanly and courteous to all, and particularly to indies; nor has he transcended in any manner his instructions. What is it the croakers want? Why this eternal bray? To open this delightful resort without any restrictions, convert it into a beer-garden, place a band therein and make night hideous with music, revelry and the cancan, and gathering within its inclosure the outcasts and ostracised of our city? Most assuredly not; yet none will deny that such is the tendency. LECTURE. Mgr. Capel lectures at St. Peter's church on Tuesday and Wednesday nights of this week, 21st and 22d of April. The mon-signor has certainly made a deep impres-sion on the cultured citis as of Memphis sion on the cultured citis is of Memphis We can scarcely wonder that Gladstone and Lord Beaconsdield should be induced, for self-protection, to take marked notice of the great churchman. Socially and intellectually he wields a singular influence among his fallowmen. In the true seare of the word he is painfully magnetic. Coalid to the control of the control of the word he is painfully magnetic.
